May 3.

A conference of the Baltimore and Washington managers of the event was held this morning and after considering the matter from every viewpoint it was finally decided to allow the athletes as finally decided to allow the sthletes as special men who manage your submarines." date on which blanks could be received and arranged in time for the race on May 7, so this time was agreed upon a marines." Not exactly. Still, only a few men have had any experience in that line yet. The boats are too new and the few to give

Time Suits Athletes.

The announcement yesterday that the race will be started at 10 o'clock in the morning, instead of 9 o'clock as last year, was well received by the contestants as, finder the new arrangement, they will be afforded an ample opportunity to get to Laurel on the day of the race without amp particular rush.

The arrangement that The Times had made to bring the Washington men back to this city, after they have been to the Turkish baths after the race, has served to even further stimulate interest in the big affair and not a day has passed during the last two weeks that additional entries have not been received from the long distance runners of this city.

Rain Interferes.

The training plans mapped out for yesterday by the aspirants for glory in the big race, received another strong setback at the hands of the rainmakers, the many long-distance runs scheduled being called off.

Some of the entrants in the "Southern classic" had made arrangements to go over to Laurel yesterday and take a trial spin over the course, but, this, too, had to be abandoned. The roads are in bad shape as the result of the rain and the runners will undoutsedly experience great difficulty in finding proper training roads. The Speedway, which is macadamized, drains quickly, so it will probably agrout the training quickly, so it will probably agrout the training quickly. The Specdway, which is macadamized, drains quickly, so it will probably afford the training attelves of the city the earliest means of training after the storm, ofbuds have passed.

As there remain only thirteen days in which to complete training, the lads who intend to win one of the handsome medals offered will have to do some exceptionally hard work. The training tasks of the lads have not been rosy since the race was announced, on account of continued inclement weather, but they should not be discouraged.

Advice to Novices.

There is yet time to permit even the novices to get into first-rate shape, and tae more experienced athletes will have little trouble when it comes to the training and will have to jog only ten or twelve miles three or four times before the race in order to be able to put up a corking good effort.

To the novice men it might be found useful to carry out the following schedule for covering distance during the remaining two weeks. Start out with a jog of from four to five miles and increase the distance daily until you are able to go ten. When the ten-mile space, he distance daily until you are able to go ten. When the ten-mile space, it has been found advisable to go ten. When the ten-mile space, it has been found advisable to go ten. When the ten-mile space, it has been found advisable to go ten. When the ten-mile space, it has been found advisable to go one will become accust to med to the constant strain on limb, muscles, and wind. Two or three days should be set aside before the race as a period of rest, in which little work is recommended to keep one on edge after a let-up in running.

one who wants all that, captain," he observed. "There are others."

"So I suppose. But the difference between them and me is that since you got here I've got all this right in my hist. This morning it was far away; now it is close at hand. As I said, I've been here for ten years. In that time I have been over about 5,000 wrecks, old and new. Nearly every one of them has had money on her. Some have had very large sums. Lurge or small, I have collected them all. It makes a great fortune for one; it is enough for two; but it isn't a hill of beans among a score." The steamer Queen, bound from Porto Rico to New York has among her passengers Dorothy Fairfax, the daughter of a multi-millionaire, and Frank Howard, of the United States Navy, who is being taken back by Detective Jackson on the charge of having murdered his wife. Shortly before the beat sailed the newspapers published the announcement of Miss Fairfax's engagement to Lieutenant Lovering, U. S. N. a friend of Howard's. Later, however, Miss Fairfax denied it. As the ship is skirting the Saragossa sea a storm strikes her, and is driven head on into a derelict. All the passengers take to the boats except Jackson and Howard, who get left behind. As the last boat leaves she capsizes, and Howard, leaping to the rescue, saves Miss Fairfax and takes her back on board the Queen. For two weeks they drift through the Saragossa sea among the stranded ships, and a strong friendship springs up between Dorothy and Howard.

At last they reach the center of the port of dead ships and find it inhabited by a colony of twenty-two men, two women, and a child, ruled over by a ptain Ford. They join the little colony, and after a few questions the captain invites Howard to have a drink with him. Synopsis of Chapters Already Published

Howard laughed again. "This is an age of specialization all right, captain," he returned, but it has tstruck the navy yet. Quite the contrary! Only a year or two ago, Congress wiped out all special lines and insisted that all officers should know evertyhing. Perhaps it was right, but.—" a score."

"I am beginning to see.
"I couldn't take th's money away secretly by boat—it's too bulky. I couldn't take it openly without sharing it with a dozen others—and it would need about a dozer to cut a way through this damna, weed. I've been ready to go for six souths, but I didn't see my way. Now do."
"Becently I found a safe outck and "Becently I found a safe outck and

"Well?"

"Recently I found a safe, quick, and easy way for a man with the right technical knowledge to get away from here with two or these people—and my money. But I didn't have the technical knowledge. Of all the ships that have floated in with libraries on them, not one has had a book that told me what to do. Now you have come, especially trained in the very line I want. Can you guess what my terms are now?"

"Humph! Perhaps. What is your way?"

"Miss Fairfax will go with us—as my wife"
"What!"
"Sit down, Howard, and keep your shirt on. What's the use of getting to worked up. I know I'm not exactly in Miss Fairfax's line, but she won't be the only woman who has married out of her class. I'll make good with the father, all right."
"You think you can get Miss Fairfax to marry you?"
I he spite of himself the scorn that Howard tried to hide showed in his tooice. Forbes did not notice it.
"Tve got her dead to rights. Besides, I've got the law—our law—on my side. You don't suppose ordinary rules gover ern here, do you? Not much! The sexes are too frightfull disproportionate. Counting your party, there are just twenty-four men and only three woman has always been the signal for trouble. Bad blood, quarrels, and murders have some years ago that every woman must marry within twenty-four hours after her arrival. Under that law L intend to marry Miss Fairfax. What have you to say about it?"
With the last word Captain Forbes put his elbows on the table and leaned forward staring into Howard's face. Huge, shaggy, and evidently immensely powerful, he towered menacingly above the smaller naval officer.
Howard wanted to say a good deal, but forbore. Clearly Forbes took him, but forbore. oh has had a book that told me what to do. Now you have come, especially "Twe got her dead to rights. Besides, I've got her dead to rights. Beside "Your friends!" Forbes burst into a roar of laughter. "Your friends! That's good! That's very good! One of your friends—Mir. Jackson—I intend to leave behind as a special favor to you."

For an instant Howard saw red. Then the fit passed, and he answered quietly, "You astenish me, captain."

"Oh, no, I don't! Look here, I'm on to you, Howard. You are the convict that Jackson went to Porto Rico for. Leave Jackson here, and you change your name and live anywhere in the world you like in perfect safety."

"And Miss Fairfax?" Howard almost choked as he uttered the words, but the necessity of dissembling was strong upon him.

"Miss Fairfax will go with us—as my wife!"

"What!"

"What!"

"What!"

"Your friends!" Forbes burst into a freed. That is, he must gain time, and the only way to gain time was to dissimulate.

"In don't believe I have anything to say about it just now, captain, he returned mildly, "except that I think you could make a better bargain with Colonel Fairfax if you merely returned his daughter to him safely. She'll hate you forever, you know."

Forbes' brows relaxed. "Not much she won't," he returned. "She'll come too. I know how to handle the sex. She'll be too proud to confess the truth, and she'll praise me up to the skies. You'll see! Besides, I don't want the old man's meney; I'll have enough of my own. I want his social help. Well, is it a bargain?"

Howard hesitated. "I must think about it for a voile carryin' to prevention of Tuberculosis will hold its monthly meet of dissimulate.

HIS month's Edison Record list is remarkable in that it introduces two new Grand Opera stars of the Manhattan Opera House, New York-Carmen Meiis, prima donna; and Gustav Huberdeau, basso; besides records by Marguerita Sylva, Blanche Arral and Riccardo Martin. But only not from the standpoint of Grand Opera is this month's list remarkable. The biggest hit of the season, "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" is on the Amberol (four minute) list and Billy Murray's newest success "He's a College Boy" is a head-liner from the Standard (two minute) list. And these are just samples—your dealer will play anything on this list, you wish to hear, on the Edison Phonograph.
